CALL FOR PAPERS

Mapping New Trends: Greek Scholarship in Anglophone Studies

In 2018 Gramma celebrated its 25th anniversary and its 25 issues. To mark this occasion, the 26th issue of Gramma will be devoted to the topic of New Greek Scholarship in Anglophone Studies.

We are inviting young Greek scholars, working in Greece or abroad, who are currently enrolled in a graduate programme or who have recently completed their doctoral dissertation, to submit papers on any topic related to the study of Anglophone literature and culture, in an attempt to pinpoint current critical trends and interventions as well as explore the multidisciplinary of the study and research in Anglophone Studies. We welcome contributions on such topics as politics, identities, film and spectacle, art and theatre, textual criticism, media and digital technologies, translation, as well as on historical and theoretical aspects of Anglophone literature and culture.

Papers should be in English and must not exceed 7,000 words. Please submit an electronic copy of your paper and a brief biographical note to the managing editors of the journal (following the MLA style of referencing):

Zoe Detsi detsi@enl.auth.gr

Maria Schoina schoina@enl.auth.gr

Further details on formatting and stylistic issues can be found here:
