

Tatjana Maksimovic

Research

My interests focus on Cognitive and Construction Grammar. My research focuses on grammaticalization, cross-cultural differences in expressing grammatical phenomena and subjectivity. I am also interested in showcasing the potentials of metaphors and metonymies in providing a more integrated account and explanation for language change. Additional areas of interest are bilingualism and first language acquisition, as well as the way in which metaphors, metonymies and frames affect discourse.

Education

2010-2012

MA in Theoretical and Applied Linguistics

Aristotle University of Thessaloniki

(MA thesis: Participles: Their Conceptualization, Expression and Function)

2009-2009

BA in English Language and Literature

Aristotle University of Thessaloniki

Talks

Presentation of MA thesis at the 21st International Symposium of Theoretical and Applied Linguistics, Thessaloniki, Greece, April 2013.

Employment

2013-present

Clip News, International Department

Translator

2009-present

EFL teacher