

Flyways - the human body in vibration
By Geert Vermeire

A sound-walking session with/for students of the MA in English and American Studies Program
Thursday 12/5
10:30-13:00

Flyways is a sound walk, created collaboratively by artists, performers and researchers. We go for a walk in the city, while you read, see and hear poetry, drawings and soundscapes on your mobile device, following the traces of a dragonfly. The walk is followed by a discussion about location-based storytelling in the city and introduces the tools to create an own collaborative locative media walk.

Smartphone with headphones needed

Geert Vermeire (Belgium)

Curator, artist and writer, working and living between Greece, Portugal and Belgium, with as main field an artistic practice focused on the performative, mixed reality and social practices, with as key elements the body in public space, community involvement and ethical involvement. His writing activity meets with immersive formats of artist creation and extends to interdisciplinary and artistic research, involving walking and collaborations with choreographers, sound artists, new media artists, architects and other writers.

For more information on the event, contact event coordinator, Dr. Maria Ristani (mristani@enl.auth.gr)