

Maria Dimitropoulou

Thessaloniki, Greece

mariadimit@enl.auth.gr

I am currently an undergraduate student at Aristotle university of Thessaloniki pursuing a BA in English Language and Literature. The core of my academic interests falls within the scope of English language teaching and Corpus linguistics. I have also a growing interest in Cognitive linguistics and, particularly, its applications in second language learning and teaching.

EDUCATION:

2012–Present: Certificate in English Language and Literature, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki, Thessaloniki (Greece)

28/09/2015–12/02/2016: Erasmus+ exchange student, Nottingham Trent University, Nottingham (United Kingdom)

RESEARCH PAPERS:

"David Mamet's Oleanna: An Absurdist Reading", Aristotle University of Thessaloniki (2015)

"The Power of Language in Conrad's Heart of Darkness and Greene's The Quiet American", Nottingham Trent university (2016)

"R D Laing: Do we miss the importance of his contribution by scandalizing him?", Nottingham Trent University (2016)

MEMBERSHIP IN ACADEMIC SOCIETIES:

Bald Theatre (Theatrical Group), School of English Language and Literature, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki

Transparent Windows (Book Club), School of English Language and Literature, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki

Cognitive Linguistics (Reading Group), School of English Language and Literature, Aristotle University of Thessaloniki

LANGUAGES:

Greek: Mother tongue

English: C2 level

Italian: A2 level

German: Beginner